3. Players of league age 9 are typically exempted from the Major League at Chula Vista American. However, parents may elect to have their 9 year old child tryout for the Majors division with the players ages 10-12 if they feel his/her skills may be worthy of that division. Placement in the Major Division, however, can only happen if the managers of the Majors division choose to draft that player. When a manager is awarded a team, his/her son/daughter, if not already on the team he/she has been awarded, shall trade for a player of equal value as determined by the rest of the managers and approved by the Player Agent in order to acquire that manager's own child. The 50% rule can be waived if excused by the Players Agent and Executive Board due to illness or injury at the time of the try-outs or if there is evidence to suggest that a player or manager is trying to manipulate the placement of one or more players into a division or team.

8. After the selection of all eligible 10, 11, and 12-year-old players who attended a try-out, the remaining 10, 11, and 12-year-old player names will be placed into a container. Managers will select the players by blind draw in the order of the draft until all players are assigned to teams.
